Po' Girl

£10 plus Sarah MacDougall

"Vancouver female quartet Po' Girl are a smart, sassy trip through hillbilly blues, roadhouse gospel and back-porch field hollers" - Morning Call. "A veritable force of nature with a sound that alludes to country, blues, jazz, gospel and folk without falling squarely in any one of those categories" - Evanston Review. "Po' Girl has the same womanly (not girlish, mind you) croon of the 1920s and '30s blues mamas - yet their music isn't of another era." - No Depression. With a sound that mixed post-punk guitars, psychedelia, pop-rock and folk The Wonder Stuff were the perfect alternative band in a time of Stock Aitken and Waterman. ## Dirty Strangers

£8adv £10door plus Fallen Angels

The Dirty Strangers were born in '86 riding on the coat-tails of punk while mixing the rootsy rock 'n' roll of Eddie Cochran, Gene Vincent and Chuck Berry with a little bit of Otis Redding. Keith Richards and Ron Wood appeared on their self-titled 1987 debut album and rave reviews followed. In 1993 a fine second album, Burn The Bubble, emerged but the world missed out and the band lapsed into hiatus. The Strangers were reborn in 2007 and a third album 'West 12 To Wittering', once again featuring Keith and Ronnie was released. ## The BellRays

£10adv plus support

For those of you who don't know, this is the real deal. Sexy and intelligent, passionate and powerful all at once, listening to the BellRays is like getting kicked in the balls by James Brown. The BellRays call their music "Maximum Rock & Soul," which is as much a description of the heart that goes into their music as it is the music itself. Taking a nod from the MC5, Parliament, James Brown, Miles Davis, The Stooges and The Who. Imagine a bus full of Motown artists being steamrollered by Black Flag, and you have a pretty good idea of what the BellRays sound like. www.thebellrays.com

Dan Baird and Homemade Sin

£10 plus support

Putting Dan Baird and Warner E. Hodges in the same band is like packing hydrogen and plutonium into the same bomb: it's not an intriguing combination, it's a got-damn weapon of mass destruction. In Homemade Sin, you get three-fourths of the original Georgia Satellites line-up - Baird, bassist Keith Christopher and drummer Mauro Magellan - augmented by Scorcher's gunslinger Hodges. The guitars tangle like rival strands of kudzu underneath Baird's paint-stripping howl. www.danbairdandhomemadesin.com
